Changing Times:

New Executive Director

The last year has seen many changes at RVHS as first Buzz Anderson and then Mikala Woodward have stepped down from day-to-day work with the organization. Both will remain involved on many levels. Mikala will continue as a consultant, researcher, and volunteer. As the new executive director, I am relying on her to show me the ropes!

I come to RVHS with a master's degree in Public Historical Studies from the University of California at Santa Barbara and many years of experience in the nonprofit world in the areas of grantwriting, fundraising, and community relations. My goals are to strengthen the membership base of RVHS, increase our presence in the community, and build out our collection to reflect the wider Rainier Valley.

An important step toward achieving these goals is increasing communication with members and the public. You can help us by providing your email address for our new E-News, debuting this fall.

E-communication will allow us to provide you with timely information on events, volunteer opportunities, and projects.

Farewell and Thank You from Mikala

As I am easing into my post-Director life, I wanted to say thank you once again to the Rainier Valley Historical Society and all its members. When I called Buzz Anderson’s phone number in the spring of 1995 to inquire about doing a Museology internship with the Society, I had no idea that it would lead to such an extended, rewarding relationship.

From that first summer internship (I did a Collection Review, if memory serves), to the Klondike Gold Rush exhibit I developed two years later, to my eventually taking on the role of Director, I have thoroughly enjoyed my work here. I have learned a ton – about Rainier Valley history, of course, but also about ethnic cooking, archaeology, shoestring budgets, government bureaucracies, computer maintenance, frazzled schoolteachers, writing, public speaking, community outreach, and myself.

In the last year or two I have developed new interests outside RVHS, and the organization’s needs have changed as well. It was a tough decision to step down as director, but I know it was the right one for me and for RVHS.

I hope to continue working with RVHS on grant-funded projects, the part of my job I always enjoyed most. Thank you so much for giving me the opportunity – it has truly been an honor.

—Mikala Woodward

RVHS Loses a Friend

Long time RVHS volunteer and “Mailing Goddess” Marci Tracey passed away recently, after a quiet yet courageous struggle with cancer. Her positive, can-do attitude will be sorely missed.

Marci was a life-long resident of Seattle. She attended Whitworth Elementary School, Sharples Junior High School, and Franklin High School (Class of 1965) and was a member of Girl Scout Troop 850.

Marci was a career postal employee and ardent non-profit volunteer, always eager to utilize her unique organizational and fundraising skills to the benefit of the community. Typically shying away from public recognition, her personal fulfillment was in knowing that her efforts helped contribute to the welfare of the developmentally disabled, preservation of the history of Rainier Valley and, of course, bringing joy and smiles to the people around her.

Welcome New Board Members!

Teresa Anderson was born in Seattle and lived at 4701-43rd Avenue South until she graduated from college (UW). She attended Whitworth, Sharpley, and Franklin and was editor of the Tolo yearbook in 1964-65. In 2008 Teresa volunteered to be the new editor of the Heritage News when Buzz’s daughter stepped down. Teresa has always had an affinity for her roots in the Rainier Valley and for preserving history through photographs and memorabilia. Her grandparents, Phillip and Anna Paskan, owned and operated the Columbia Shoe Repair at 3709 South Ferdinand Street from the 1930s to the late 1950s.

Karen O’Brien, a Rainier Valley native, is thrilled to be a part of RVHS. Karen was raised in a political family, daughter of Mary Schwarz and state legislator John O’Brien, where service to the community was valued most. Karen has a master’s degree in teaching from Seattle University and has recently taught Humanities at the Jr. High level. Her passion for history runs deep and she is looking forward to being an active voice in sharing Rainier Valley’s diverse and vibrant past with the larger community.

Sam Simone moved to the Rainier Valley with his wife and baby daughter in 1959, bought a house in 1962, and never left! He has been active in the community through neighborhood involvement and political campaigns, both local and national, including member/treasurer of the Rainier Beach Community Club, Block Watch Captain, former member of The Columbia Pioneers) needed volunteers to catalog photographs. Jean and Gladys had just retired, so they answered the call.

For the next 15 years Jean and Gladys showed up to work week after week on Wednesdays, clocking in well over a thousand hours each. Notably, their dedication and hard work focused on cataloging the collection. As a result, RVHS is able to retrieve the materials requested by members and the public!

Jean and Gladys first got involved in RVHS when they ran into Buzz at a Franklin High School alumni event in 1994 or so. He mentioned that the newly formed society (formerly, the Columbia Pioneers) needed volunteers to catalog photographs. Jean and Gladys had just retired, so they answered the call.

For the next 15 years Jean and Gladys showed up to work week after week on Wednesdays, clocking in well over a thousand hours each. Notably, their dedication and hard work focused on cataloging the collection. As a result, RVHS is able to retrieve the materials requested by members and the public!

Thanks to “The Girls”

For several years now, Jean Bates and Gladys Rash have been ready to retire—a second time! Now, with the arrival of several new collections volunteers, the restructuring of the Collections Committee, and the continued involvement of former-intern-now-Master-in-her-own-right Chelsea Rodriguez, it is finally possible for Jean and Gladys to take a well-earned rest. In June “the girls” (as Buzz Anderson always calls them), came by for their last Wednesday session—and a celebratory brunch.

Jean and Gladys had just retired, so they answered the call.

For the next 15 years Jean and Gladys showed up to work week after week on Wednesdays, clocking in well over a thousand hours each. Notably, their dedication and hard work focused on cataloging the collection. As a result, RVHS is able to retrieve the materials requested by members and the public!

Jean and Gladys never spent much time in the limelight, but their behind-the-scenes work kept RVHS running smoothly. From writing thank you notes and deeds of gift to creating cheerful flower displays, they were always supportive and always willing to pitch in and do whatever needed to be done!

Thank you, Jean and Gladys!

Days Gone By: Columbia Shoe Repair

They were known as the shoemaker’s daughters—Mary, Katherine (Katy), Helen, and Anne Drazic (photo, L-R). Born in Spokane, Washington, they moved to Seattle in the 1920s after their father died and their mother Anna remarried. The girls were approximately 12, 10, 7, and 3 years old at the time. They grew up in the house at 3709 Ferdinand Street, behind the Columbia Shoe Repair.

I am the daughter of one of the shoemaker’s daughters, Mary Drazic Anderson. When they arrived in Seattle, Phillip and Anna Paskan rented a house at 5050–42nd Avenue South. At the outset, Phillip obtained work through the WPA (Works Projects Administration), a program introduced by President Roosevelt to provide work relief for the unemployed. Anna found work at a laundry. It was the Depression.

Phillip was a shoemaker by trade from his native country of Yugoslavia. As time went on, he was able to engage his skills by repairing shoes in the evenings. By day, he was a shoe salesman.

The Columbia Shoe Repair became a reality when Phillip and Anna bought a house in Columbia City. At first, the shop was set up in the living room. Later, they added on to the front of the house, creating a separate space for the shoe repair business with street level access.

The Columbia Shoe Repair was in operation until the late 1950s. Phillip retired and he, Anna, and Katherine moved from downtown Columbia City to a newly-built house on Morgan Street. Phillip died in 1962. Anna lived for another 20+ years; she passed away in 1984.

Today, in the place of the Columbia Shoe Repair, there is another repair shop—Bikeworks. There are few changes to the basic structure of the house and shop, although the property is no longer used as a residence. For my family, the home behind the shop is what we recall with love and affection. Family and friends never used the front door—always the side door which opened into the kitchen. There always was a pot of soup simmering on the stove, homemade bread and cinnamon rolls fresh from the oven. The Paskan grandchildren learned first-hand the customs and traditions of their Croatian heritage. Everyone was welcome at the Paskan home—especially visiting servicemen during World War II. It was a hub of activity for family and friends alike.

In 2008, I volunteered as editor of the Rainier Valley Heritage News. While I haven’t lived in the Rainier Valley since 1969, I will always have an affinity for my roots in Columbia City and remember with fondness the Columbia Shoe Repair. Today, the RVHS office is located across the street from 3709 Ferdinand Street.

“Everybody In” Project Will Document Community Activism in the Rainier Valley

RVHS has begun a new project which I will be working on with local writer and community activist John Hoole. “Everybody In” is funded by a King County 4Culture Special Projects grant.

John and I are researching and documenting the history of community activism in the Rainier Valley. We’re interested in tracing the roots of our current community issues and organizations back to the 1970s.

We’ve already dug up a trove of information at the Municipal Archives, at the Seattle Public Library, and in a marvelous collection of documents and slides donated by Rodney Herold, co-founder in 1975 of SESCO (South East Seattle Community Organization).

We will be recording and transcribing oral history interviews with activists, government officials, and other participants about the events of the era. (If you’d like to help, or to suggest potential interviewees, let us know!) These interviews, along with any photos and documents we uncover, will be added to RVHS’s collection for future researchers.

John and I will also write a series of articles about key moments in the development of Rainier Valley’s political movements. We hope to turn these into a book in the future.

Bringing World Religion Home Project to Wrap Up this Fall

RVHS’s “Bringing World Religion Home” project with The New School will be going online this fall. Watch for it on the RVHS website!

I will be gathering background information to accompany the photos, videos, and writings that the students produced during their field trips to different Rainier Valley religious institutions last fall.

Together, their teacher, Chris Quigley, and I will document the project’s lesson plans for other teachers to use.

Web Threads

Our website rainiervalleyhistory.org continues to improve.

Thanks again to King County 4Culture for funding the creation of the new website, to the Vacca Family for underwriting the costs of the baseball slide show, and to Dave Eskenazi, whose knowledge of baseball made this possible.

“Martin Luther King Jr. Way was once named Empire Way. Why?”

Volunteers Inventory Newspaper Collection

This summer volunteers started a new project of inventorying RVHS’s extensive newspaper collection. The newspaper collection includes historic Beacon Hill and South District Journal newspapers — some of which date back to the 1920s.

This project provided volunteers with an insider’s perspective of what it was like to live in the Rainier Valley neighborhood from the 1920s on. Favorite front-page stories included announcements about visiting mothers-in-law, notices of Women’s Club meetings, outrage over the “dilapidated” Lucille Street viaduct (1949), and updates on the progress of WWII and local soldiers.

Thank you to the following volunteers for giving up their Saturday mornings for this project:

- Anna Bergman

Collections Management Update

On January 3, 2009, the Rainier Valley Historical Society Board voted to approve the proposed Collections Management Policy (CMP), which was written by Chelsea Rodriguez as part of her 2008 Museology thesis. The CMP outlines new processes for accessioning, loaning, and deaccessioning artifacts. It also calls for the creation of a Collections Committee.

If you are interested in learning more about the policy, a copy is available at the RVHS office.
